IPSB - 550 PROGRAM COURSES - 2010

Deep Tissue I

24 HRS $360

IPSB's style of deep tissue addresses tissue layer by layer, non-invasively, with the goal of producing maximum release with minimal effort and without adding trauma to tissue already traumatized. This three course series also deepens understanding of anatomy and how it functions in relation to posture and BodyMind considerations. Common musculo-skeletal pathologies and how to work with them are included in the second and third courses. Educating clients to feel for the experience of tissue release and not just pressure on the tissue is also an important component of IPSB Deep Tissue, as is self-care practices for the client and therapist.

Deep Tissue I advances anatomical understanding of individual muscles and their actions and heightens palpatory recognition of the different qualities of tension in the tissue. Adding new tools to those from the Massage Technician level, students expand techniques to create focused tension release. Tai Chi and correct body mechanics are practiced and integrated into the bodywork.

Prerequisite: Massage Tech or equiv.

STRUCTURAL INTEGRATION AT IPSB

In the tradition of Ida Rolf, Structural Integration offers orthopedic and holistic approaches to the restoration and evolution of the human form. Body analysis, structural strategies, practitioner biomechanics, palpatory accuracy, joint mobilizations and myofascial techniques for pain relief and increased range of motion are primary themes.

STRUCTURAL INTEGRATION SERIES 2010

Advanced Neck Techniques

6 HRS $90

Trading increased mobility for decreased stability, the neck is a common site of strain and discomfort. Alleviating cervical pain and restoring normal range of motion are the focus of this class. Direct and indirect technique manipulation styles are covered. Also discussed are self-help skills and personal ergonomics to functionally decrease body tension.

Spinal Biomechanics

6 HRS $90

Offering new ways of helping clients with back pain by releasing the spine at core levels, this class covers basic spinal biomechanics and accompanying myofascial strain patterns. Palpatory assessment and range and leverage concepts are taught. Associated craniosacral and visceral anatomy are discussed in terms of their structural relationships to the spine.

Prerequisite: Massage Technician Training or Equivalent

Structural Craniosacral

6 HRS $90

A fascial anatomy approach to Craniosacral Therapy, this course teaches precise manipulations of the membranes and fascia associated with the cranial, facial and sacral bones, to support a higher order of structural integrity in the body. This poly-fascial "systems" perspective also bridges anatomy and energy by embracing their interrelationship as a natural symbiotic state. Decompression and mobilization techniques are explained, demonstrated and practiced.

Structural Visceral

6 HRS $90

Through precise manipulations of the membranes and fascia associated with the thoracic, abdominal and pelvic cavities, the visceral system is brought to a higher order of structural integrity which in turn allows the compensating musculoskeletal system to relax. Particular attention is paid to the interrelationship between bones and membranes (pleura, peritoneum and pelvic floor). Decompression and mobilization techniques are explained, demonstrated and practiced.
